

Hungary's Reality

Hungary is currently experiencing war-like energetic conditions. On both material and spiritual levels, the country has stepped onto a path of decline, and only a few realities remain that are capable of rising above this state. These more positive realities are mostly sustained by foreign support, functioning like small islands in a sea of difficulties, trying to help uplift the spirit of the Hungarian people.

The nation itself is unable to generate enough material strength to create a more stable and healthier reality. Without external assistance from more developed countries, the nation could easily slip into severe conditions. A comprehensive aid package and a long-term support program could represent the only way out of this situation. Only with such help can we build a future filled with more love and enriched with greater knowledge.