

We Are Born with Divine Abilities

Human beings do not arrive in the world by accident. Each of us carries within a primordial, divine consciousness that extends far beyond the boundaries of the physical body. Deep within our existence lives the creative force from which the world itself was born. This inner quality enables us to perceive the subtle layers of reality, understand invisible connections, and enter into communion with the source of creation.

Human life is not merely a biological process but a sacred opportunity: to recognize that we are more than what the eyes can see. Our body is an instrument, our mind a gateway, and our soul the vast space in which divine qualities can unfold. Every sense, every thought, every intuition serves the purpose of bringing us closer to the one divine light from which we originate.

We are born with divine abilities because the root of our existence lies not in matter but in consciousness. This consciousness is eternal, boundless, and capable not only of observing the world but interpreting it, experiencing it, and shaping it.

We are wondrous beings whose senses — hearing, sight, smell, touch — allow us to receive the full richness of the world around us. Our body, mind, and soul were created so that we could perceive every layer of creation. This is why we say: we were made perfectly.

When we are born, we arrive with a consciousness capable of thinking and learning. This is why we, too, are creators — carriers of the same divine origin from which the world emerged. With our consciousness, we can memorize, recall ancient memories, and perceive connections. Among all living beings, only humans possess this ability at such a high level.

The crystal skulls discovered by archaeologists also suggest that our ancestors revered the immense capacity of the human mind. Although we cannot match the memory or speed of computers, we can do what no machine can: we think, feel, interpret, and create.

The human soul also possesses inner abilities such as intuition, empathy, and creativity. These cannot be measured by instruments, yet they hold immense power. Intuition often guides us toward decisions that logic cannot explain, yet we feel them to be true — this is the divine compass within us. Empathy allows us to understand the feelings of others and offer help — one of the highest forms of love. Creativity is the force through which we bring new worlds into being: art, music, literature, science. When we create, the divine presence moves through us.

We can perceive the world so deeply because our soul is eternal and not limited by time or space. We can love even when it hurts because love is the deepest layer of our divine nature. We can rise after hardship because our consciousness can restore order even in the darkest moments. We can create because the power of creation lives in our heart. We can forgive because the soul's original nature is peace and restoration. Intuition works within us because we are connected to the unseen world and higher levels of consciousness. Our thoughts shape reality because our consciousness carries creative force. We are creative because new realities seek to be born through us. We long for harmony because the soul's true home is order. And we can uplift others simply through our presence because the divine quality within us radiates outward and touches those around us.

These abilities are not learned — they are innate divine gifts waiting to be recognized.

Human existence is nothing less than a divine journey through the earthly world. We are all born from the same divine origin, and to it we return. The divine force within us waits to be nourished so it may unfold. When we awaken to our true nature, the world is no longer an obstacle but a sacred space where the soul can reveal what it is capable of. And then it becomes clear: the divine is not outside of us — it lives within us, and through us it illuminates the world.
